

What Does Not Fade

A final glance, a silent breath,
then light dissolves the trace of death.
Yet something deeper still remains,
unmoved by time or loss or chains.

It moves through thought, through gaze, through air,
returns to none, yet everywhere.
A spark that rests beyond all flame,
and burns within without a name.

