

Perhaps It Starts in Silence

A tree stands quiet in the dawn,
the light returns, but night's not gone.

A gentle step on softened land,
a silent hope extends its hand.

A smile moves gently, heart to heart,
still shy, but steady from the start.
A breath, a glance, a word takes flight—
and peace awakens into light.

